Well-being

Good

Children have good opportunities to make choices and decisions about what affects them. They interact positively with their friends and those caring for them.

Children are confident communicators as their wants, moods and needs are considered. They express themselves well. For example, children were keen to introduce themselves and talk about what they like to play with. They spoke animatedly about participating in a variety of craft and outdoor experiences. A child said excitedly 'mae'r go carts yn brilliant!'. Children's polite requests at snack time for more food or drinks were responded to by staff in a timely manner.

Children are familiar with the daily routines and prepare themselves well for outdoor play and home time. They approach staff with ease to make their requests and eagerly invite them to join in with their play.

Children interact positively with their friends and those caring for them. They enjoy the social occasion of snack time and sit nicely at the table using good manners. Children are learning about kindness. For instance, an older friend held their younger's friend hand and encouraged them to kick the football into the goal. This made the younger child happy, and they were delighted with their achievement. Children are learning to take turns and co-operate well together. For instance, during a game of golf, children took turns to putt the ball into the hole and encouraged their friends to have a go. They organised their own games of ping pong and football and asked staff politely to help them keep score.

Children are active and curious learners. They enjoy a variety of indoor tabletop activities such as puzzles, games, and craft. Children maintain concentration appropriately to complete them. They develop their imagination well playing in the home corner using a range of related props to pretend to make a teatime scene. Children enjoy playing outdoors in the fresh air organising their own obstacle course with a selection of natural and recycled resources. They help each other to walk across the obstacle course and this develops their physical and co-ordination skills well. Children had lots of fun, whizzing around the yard on scooters, go carts and bikes.

Children develop their independence suitably. However, during snack time children are not afforded the opportunity to serve themselves snacks and drinks. The responsible individual acknowledged this and said they are working on ideas to improve the snack time experience. They are learning to do most things for themselves with positive encouragement from the staff. For instance, children collect their personal items and organise themselves appropriately in readiness for home time.

Staff encourage children to wash their hands helping them to develop their personal hygiene practice effectively. They encourage children to develop their physical skills while playing outdoors in the fresh air. Most staff have completed mandatory training suitable for the age range of children being cared for.

Staff record accidents and incidents but not all of these are signed by parents and carers to evidence they are kept informed. Staff conduct regular fire drills, so children and staff know what to do in the event of an emergency. They record the outcome of the fire drill to aid improvements in future practice.

Staff encourage children to co-operate and be kind to their friends. They provide a warm and welcoming environment and make sure children are provided with reassurance and comfort when needed. This creates a relaxed and happy atmosphere. Staff are responsive and sensitive to the individual needs of all children.

Staff have a responsive approach to activity planning and focus on children directing their own play positively. Staff are consistently engaging with children during their activities. For example, children made love hearts to celebrate Santes Dwynwen, decorated biscuits and made craft rabbits and chicks for Easter and decorated a Christmas Tree. Other photographs showed children participating in activities organised by the Urdd Gobaith Cymru and experiencing sensory play with a range of recycled materials.

Environment

Good

The people running the setting provide a welcoming, friendly, and clean environment where children can play independently.

The people running the setting ensure risk assessments appropriately identify the potential hazards to children and the measures in place to manage these risks. The people running the setting manage access to the premises via the hosting school electronic system to record visitors, however, the setting does not have their own visitor book to keep their own record of visitors attending the setting. They ensure staff supervise children well during their indoor and outdoor experiences. The people running the setting make sure staff implement good cleaning routines. Information is available to everyone about how they will deal with emergencies.

The people running the setting make sure the layout of the play area promotes children's independence enabling them to freely explore and make their own choices about what they want to play with. Play areas are spacious and attractively organised with good quality toys, resources, and furniture suitable for the ages cared for. Areas for rest are presented nicely and invite children to have some quiet time to read books.

The people running the setting make sure there are plenty of resources to develop children's language, numeracy, and self-awareness skills. They ensure children have easy access to recycled and sustainable resources to further develop their sensory skills and curiosity. The people running the setting have a satisfactory statement of purpose that reflects the service provided. However, they have not reviewed their policies regularly to ensure they contain up-to-date information. The people running the setting have ensured the Disclosure and Barring Service (DBS) certificates for those working at the setting are current. They have ensured all the required information has been gathered in children's individual records. At our visit, not all the required information was present in the staff member's employment files to verify their identity. The responsible individual confirmed they had seen the required documentation but had not kept it or recorded a statement in the file to say they had seen it. Following our visit, the responsible individual took immediate action to address this matter and submitted satisfactory evidence to CIW. The responsible individual discussed the process of staff induction, but this had not been recorded for each staff member. The responsible individual explained that supervision of staff is conducted informally via observations of their practice and through discussion with staff. However, there are no records of these discussions to evidence staff are being provided with regular and meaningful supervision to discuss their welfare, practice, training needs, safeguarding and professional development. The responsible individual presented a sample of recorded annual appraisals conducted with staff. The people running the setting record safeguarding concerns, but they do not keep a record of the outcome and what action has been taken. Staff spoken to said they enjoy working at the setting and the people running the setting are approachable.

The people running the setting have built positive partnerships with parents and carers. Parents and carers said they are 'very happy' with the setting, their children are happy to attend, and staff are 'brilliant', providing parents and carers with daily updates.
