Well-being

Excellent

Children are confident speakers and communicate their needs effectively to staff. They are listened to, which makes them feel they really matter. Some children are developing their speech and are comfortable to respond when prompted to use words. Children routinely use photographs for self-registration, and to make choices throughout the session as to what they would like to play with. Children choose activities and toys to play indoors or outdoors. They excitedly play with the farm indoors adding numerous small loose parts as they wish. Children outdoors enjoyed planting tomato plants and riding on trikes.

Children are extremely settled and comfortable in their surroundings. They are kind and caring, respond well to instructions, and complete daily routines willingly. Sessions begin with children and their parents/carers being warmly greeted at the gate. Children benefit enormously from the positive interactions they receive from staff who are excellent role models. Children learn to treat others in a similar way.

Children's behaviour is exceptional because of the responsive attention they receive. Children with additional needs have their needs met. Children learn to share, take turns, and to be kind and caring towards their friends. They enjoy the social occasion of mealtimes and sit nicely at the table. Children are polite and use good manners, with only a few in need of a reminder when answering 'diolch' ('thank you' in Welsh). Children have formed good friendships and are eager to help each other, for example, one child helped another find a chair and open up their packed lunch.

Children play an active role in planning. Staff ask what they want to do and a list is made and then executed, for example children chose to do a sports day that afternoon. Children are continually stimulated and very interested in their play. They really enjoy learning new things and are thriving emotionally, socially, physically, and intellectually. Children are constantly being stretched and challenged by staff who have high expectations of them and provide the support they may need. Children are often praised for using their imagination and coming up with their own. Children are rewarded in numerous ways, for example, receiving stickers and being in the proud cloud. They explore new challenges such as putting on their shoes by themselves and fully prepare their snack and are pleased when they achieve something new. Children like to tell others about what they have been doing, and this boosts their self-esteem when staff show an interest and suggest something new and exciting to extend their learning.

Children feel extremely well supported by staff to develop their self-help skills and independence. They are positively encouraged to think for themselves and to find their own answers to problems and challenges they face.

Care and Development

Excellent

Staff fully understand their roles and responsibilities to keep children safe and healthy. Policies and procedures cover all aspects of the children's care and safety which are reviewed regularly and shared with staff. Most staff have significant experience and in-depth knowledge of childcare. All have first aid certificates and have attended appropriate safeguarding training for their role. Staff and child attendances are recorded and these show staff to child ratios are fully met. Staff practice fire drills regularly. Procedures for recording accidents, incidents and the administration of prescribed medications are suitable, with parents being informed and signing forms as required. Staff competently implement best practice to promote healthy eating and lifestyle programmes, such as 'Healthy and Sustainable Pre-School Award'. They follow good hygiene procedures when cleaning play areas and promote good handwashing routines to minimise cross infection. Snacks are planned over a cycle and include healthy and substantial snacks with water and milk to drink. Staff encourage children to play outdoors in the fresh air to develop their physical skills and to boost their well-being.

Staff have an excellent understanding of child development. They are responsive; listening to children's requests to play and respecting their views when they want to do things their own way. Staff interact positively and demonstrate patience, warmth, and kindness. They successfully promote positive behaviour and celebrate with a child when they see this. They use distraction techniques well and offer a few kind words for example to explain why running indoors is not appropriate. Staff reassure children often and comfort them when it is appropriate to do so. Such positive warm interactions create a calm and relaxed child centred atmosphere.

Staff have a responsive approach to activity planning and focus on children directing their own play well. Staff recognise when to intervene to extend children's play and when to step back and allow them to develop their own ideas. Staff plan for activities appropriately and successfully provide the support needed for children with additional learning needs (ALN). All staff have access to really detailed individual progress reports, which help them to better understand the needs of those children they are keyworkers for. Many children benefit from a secure attachment to a member of staff who is aware of their next steps in learning. Staff monitor progress closely and consult with specialist agencies.

Staff raise children's awareness of their wider society creatively. For example, they use authentic cultural artefacts, educational posters, photographs, and books. Leaders ensure it is an inclusive provision.

Environment*Excellent

Leaders ensure all areas are safe, secure, and clean. Policies and procedures are in place to support staff and ensure they keep up to date with all health and safety requirements. Daily checklists and procedures are used effectively. Current infection control guidance is followed and updated in response to outbreaks of infections.

The premises is set out to provide a welcoming, calm, and stimulating environment, which creates a good feeling of being safe, secure and a sense of belonging. Space is provided for children to hang their coats; they currently have a no bag policy. The playroom is dimly lit with lamps and twinkling lights in place of the overhead large lighting units. Children's independence is promoted as they can freely explore the indoor and outdoor areas, making their own choices about what they want to play with and where. A large undercover area ensures children can be outdoors in all weathers. The outdoor play space is exceptional and provides the children with an abundance of play and learning opportunities and this is always being expanded. There is an enclosed grassed area with wooden huts and large loose parts, climbing equipment and the new addition of a green house. There is a sand pit and suitable surfaces for ride on toys. Toys and resources are suitable for the age and stage of development of children. For example, appropriately sized furniture, along with real crockery, dressing up clothes, kitchen utensils and twinkling lights. Outdoor and indoor areas are attractively organised and promote active learning. The people running the setting make sure children have some opportunity to learn about the natural world and have organised areas for children to plant their own fruit, vegetables, and flowers, and to learn about wildlife.

There are a variety of good quality developmentally appropriate play and learning resources indoors for children to be offered an excellent range of learning experiences. There are resources to develop children's sensory, language, numeracy, and self-awareness skills. There is a good variety of recycled, authentic, and sustainable resources to develop children's curiosity. These are displayed around the setting. Children's artwork is celebrated, and photographs are displayed nicely on the walls showing their efforts are valued.

Leadership and Management

Excellent

People who run the setting are aware of their responsibilities and adhere to regulations. They exceed the National Minimum Standards and operate with a clear vision for the service which emphasises a 'child centred' approach, partnership with parents and the active promotion of children's 'all-round' development. They notify Care Inspectorate Wales (CIW) of significant events and changes to the setting. The statement of purpose provides parents with the information they need alongside policies and procedures. The person in charge/manager is visible, approachable and responds to concerns and anxieties from parents and carers swiftly. For example, holding a weekly session for parents and young children. The support offered to families extends beyond the care of their children in the setting, as families are also supported to provide the best outcomes for their children at home, it also provides support in transitioning up to pre-school. The people running the setting have a good understanding of their responsibility to promote the Welsh language and this is being further developed.

Those who run the setting demonstrate a strong commitment to a continual drive for improvement. There are appropriate and successful systems in place. They seek the views of staff, children, parents, and professionals who have links to the setting. All staff are open to new ideas and are willing to try out different ways of working. They display a willingness to learn, promote best practice and value feedback from umbrella organisations, external auditors, the local authority, and regulators.

Leaders ensure staff know they are valued, are given clear direction and their potential is developed. Staff spoke of support from those who run the setting, a commitment to training, and a strong culture of continuous professional development. These are modelled by the manager and evidenced in staff files. Leaders ensure staff update mandatory training and attend additional training such as responsive planning, autism awareness, speech and language awareness, healthy eating, and loose parts. There is evidence of regular supervision meetings which link into an annual appraisal process. They ensure meetings are used to develop individuals' confidence.

Those who run the setting work closely and positively with parents to meet children's needs and to keep them informed of their child's development. Strong partnerships have been established with a range of organisations. Good practice is shared with other childcare providers, and prominent figures have visited to see what the playgroup has achieved. Such experiences provide encouragement to the children, their families, and the people who run and work at the setting.
